Students form up outside the school in celebration of Westglen's 25th anniversary. The school was finished in 1987 and has been teaching pupils from Grades 5-8 since then.

Westglen School celebrates 25 years

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Westglen School's students and staff celebrated the school's 25th anniversary last Thursday, Nov. 22 by taking the last period off classes to take a group photo and celebrate with some cake.

Connie Visser, who has been teaching at the school since its inception in 1987, said the school as it is today didn't start when the building was constructed.

"I think the school developed into Westglen," said Visser.

"In the beginning, it was called Westglen, and we had to establish special events, yearly activities, and things that made the school and staff come together. The traditions that we still maintain today, like the turkey dinner."

These kinds of events were what really helped develop the personality of the school, turning it into what it is today, she said.

"I think that's how it developed, establishing Westglen having a personality to it. And you know people come into our school and they see a feeling of caring and love and teamwork."

Sheila Johnson, who just started working at the school as an educational assistant this September, was in Grade 7 when students first moved into the school.

She was one of the students to go on the first tour and attend the school, she said, adding that it was interesting to watch the school develop from a building into a community.

"I loved going to school here," said Johnson.

"I really remember it well. I was involved in lots of the activities that went on here. I think what's neat for me here now, is I left Westglen in 1988 and I didn't really think I'd be coming back."

Now she is working with students that were her age when she attended.

"Here I am now working with kids that are my age when I left here, which is a really great experience, actually. I love it, for the same reasons as Connie (Visser). The staff is great, the administration is great, and the kids love being here."

Until sometime in October 1987, Visser said the school was being run out of portable trailers and the old high school, which was across 23rd Street from Ross Ford.

"The kids had a break because there was no place to go, and then we spent a couple of days unpacking everything and setting up our classrooms."

One of her favourite memories was when she and a fellow teacher were asked to lead the whole school in aerobics, because Westglen had challenged Olds to an activity day, she said.

Visser said she was still new to the teaching world when she took on the job at Westglen, noting that she had only two years' teaching experience at the time.

She added that the other teachers at Westglen helped her to grow in her profession.

"The staff," said Visser. "Just memories of working with the finest teachers I've ever known, who helped shape and mould me.

"Amazing administration from Rob (Urban), all the way to Jeff and Carolyn, they're always supportive and providing you where you need to go."

Rotary Jazz Fest grows students' skills

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Didsbury band students were treated to two days of personal instruction from some of the best musicians in the country last week, Nov. 20-21 at the third annual Olds Rotary Jazz Fest.

The event, which is partially sponsored by the Olds and Didsbury-Carstairs Rotary Clubs had 16 bands from across Chinook's Edge School Division (CESD) partaking in clinics instructed by members of the band Mocking Shadows as well as Johnny Summers, director of the Calgary Jazz Orchestra.

Kirk Wassmer, music director for Didsbury High School, said about 50 per cent of students at DHS are in one of the band programs, and to have an event of this magnitude helps students experience learning in a different way.

"The clinicians that were working with the kids down at the church were also playing in the Ray Charles Tribute Orchestra on Tuesday night," said Wassmer.

"So it was a really neat experience for them to see those guys playing in that group when they had just been working with them earlier in the day."

That helps bring the whole experience full circle for the students, he added.

"That was valuable, and Johnny Summers is just amazing with the kids."

The format for the workshops included students playing in their band for 45 minutes with Summers guiding them and giving them tips, he said.

"And for the other 45 minutes, they were in like-instrument sections," he noted.

"The saxes were working with the pro sax player, trumpets with the pro trumpet player, so it was very focused and directed toward (the students') instruments."

This is the 10th year that CESD has been putting on the workshop part of the event, and it's the third year that the workshops have been complemented by evening concerts in Olds, he added.

"When I first got to CESD, the music teachers, we had always planned events...but we didn't have anything going for the jazz program," said Wassmer.

"I love jazz music, and thought it would be valuable to have an event, something directly related to jazz music."

The Olds Rotary Club was approached by Wassmer three years ago when the concert series was added to the workshops, and Wassmer said they were on board immediately.

Wayne McCune, a member of the Olds club who volunteered for both the workshops and concerts said that this is just another example of the Rotary Club helping kids.

"They're not poor kids, but they're gifted, and gifted kids need help too," said McCune.

He also spoke very highly of the Didsbury High School band program, which he said is "absolutely unparalleled by any other program."

Some of Westglan School's band students get personal instruction from renowned musician Johnny Summers at the Zion Evangelical Missionary Church last Tuesday.

"Didsbury seniors are at the level of any college or university band," he added.

"In most schools, the football players are the heroes. Here, the band students are the heroes," he said.

He talked briefly about Niko Tsiras, a 2012 graduate who was a top saxophone player in the DHS band last year and is now considered a top player at Mount Royal University.

"What we've got here is a revolutionary music program of instruction that begins every Monday morning at 7:30 a.m., through till Friday, and they do school full-time too."

Wassmer has put thousands of hours into these students, and that effort is easy to see, he said.

Tesia Runnett, a Grade 8 student from Westglan School plays electric bass in the school's jazz band. She got instruction on how to play an upright bass from one of the pros, Jory Kinjo of the band Mocking Shadows.

"It's nice to have somebody who actually knows what they're doing instead of being self-taught," said Runnett.

This was her first time playing an upright bass and added that Kinjo helped her pick it up and even taught her a few tips on how to play it properly, she said.

Fashion show well-received by attendees

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

The Fall Fashion Show fundraiser at the Elks Lodge on Saturday, Nov. 17 was a big hit with ladies around town. Included in the event was a prime rib buffet dinner, table decorating, a silent auction, and Fashions on Main presenting its fall fashion line.

Cathy Jackson/Submitted

The night's MC, Nasya Gibson, said attendees enjoyed the show.

More than $15,000 was raised through the event which was held to support Project Roret, a mission in Kenya, said Gibson.

"The evening was a spectacular success," she added. "I was so happy that I could be a part of it. Project Roret took a huge leap forward because of the generosity of our community."

The 150-seat show sold out three weeks before the event, she noted.

"And of course, the backbone of the event was the committed volunteers from Chinook Winds," she said.

"It was a lot of work for our volunteers to pull off an event like this, but it was so worth it. I'm still talking to my friends about the evening, it was just that great."

Merchants from the area donated goods for the auction and sale, and there was also a number of African art and carvings to be had.

Cathy Jackson, who had recently returned from Roret after spending about a week there, said, "We were so amazed at how supportive and generous the local merchants of Didsbury, Olds and Carstairs were."

"We will be making this an annual event, so keep an eye out next fall for when the tickets go on sale. We are hoping they sell out fast."

Because all of the administration and organization work was done by volunteers, Jackson noted most of the money raised will be going straight into Project Roret, after taking care of food and rental costs.

"We had really good feedback from people at and after the show," she added.

"The African art sale and silent auction were big hits, and many people said they had a lot of fun and were excited about coming again next year. It was a great response."

Jackson made note of some of her favourite parts of the night, too.

"I was really excited to see how all the decorations turned out," she said.

"We asked people to decorate the tables and everyone had so much fun with it. It was fun to see all the different themes and designs."

"The fashion show was really fun. The models had a blast and had fun with the audience as well."

Opinion

Editorial

Youth health demands ongoing anti-tobacco fight

The provincial government has announced new battle plans in the fight against youth tobacco use – the latest in a long line of attempts to protect kids and teens from the many short- and long-term health dangers associated with smoking.

DAN SINGLETON

Whether the new plans will finally bring an end to youth tobacco use in West Central Alberta is very unlikely. Nevertheless the latest efforts are both needed and welcome, especially if they help keep more young people from using tobacco now and in the future.

Last week the Redford Tories announced several proposed legislative changes as part of their Tobacco Reduction Strategy, changes the government says will protect young people while at the same time making life harder for offenders such as merchants who ignore underage tobacco sale bans and rules.

"As part of our continued fight against cancer and our commitment to the health of Albertans, this government is taking action to make tobacco and tobacco-like products less attractive to youth, further reduce exposure to second-hand smoke and help Albertans quit using tobacco," said Health Minister Fred Horne.

The government says the "Creating Tobacco-Free Futures: Alberta's Strategy to Prevent and Reduce Tobacco Use" initiative will focus on a number of priorities:

- Enhancing tobacco cessation training for health professionals.
- Expanding workplace, school-based and community tobacco-cessation programs.
- Enacting legislation to protect children from second-hand smoke in vehicles.
- Increasing social media efforts to highlight tobacco use dangers.
- And passing new legislation restricting the sale of flavoured tobacco.

The government will also consider a number of other changes over the next decade, including hikes in tobacco taxes, more restrictions on public smoking, new warning signage where cigarettes and other tobacco products are sold, and making tobacco cessation products and resources more readily available, says Minister Horne.

Alberta's Deputy Chief Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Martin Lavoie says the new legislative plans will provide a "comprehensive approach to preventing and reducing tobacco use and protecting from its harmful effects, ultimately leading to much better health for Albertans. Individuals, their families, their friends, their employers and society as a whole will benefit tremendously."

The decades-long fight against youth tobacco use in Alberta has had a number of successes over the years, with far fewer young people smoking today than in past decades.

Hopefully these newly announced legislative efforts will lead to even more victories in the anti-tobacco use war being fought on behalf of Alberta young people.

And with the future health-care cost savings that will result from keeping young people tobacco free certainly running into the billions of dollars, all MLAs should be encouraged to make sure these new legislative initiatives move forward without delay.

Commentary

Banning flavoured tobacco won't stop youth smoking

I've had enough. Not enough nicotine, though. I am a smoker, in case anybody hasn't seen me in front of the office with my pipe. I smoke because I like it.

There are a plethora of bad things that it will do to me, I know. But I do it anyways.

I am an adult, of age, and can legally smoke whatever tobacco I want to.

But I've had enough of our governments trying to get rid of flavoured tobacco products because they 'entice youth to smoke.'

Yes, I understand that youth are more likely to smoke if there are candy, fruity-flavoured tobaccos, but what about the adults, like myself, who enjoy the odd cigarillo?

Even my mother, who quit smoking cigarettes years ago, still enjoys a few cigarillos after a drink or two.

Cigarillos have more natural tobacco, less strong smoke, little to no cravings, and hey, they taste great!

Two years ago, the Canadian government banned flavoured tobacco products weighing under 1.4 grams that contained cigarette filters.

Thankfully, for cigarillo lovers everywhere, Casa Cubana, producer of both Prime Time and Bullseye cigarillos was the first company to officially exploit a loophole in the new law.

Its newest 'Plus' cigars were altered just enough to satisfy the new regulations.

Prime Time Plus cigars exceed the minimum 1.4 g weight requirement and do not use a cigarette-style filter. Since they were now legal again, many other cigarillo producers quickly followed suit.

That was one hurdle, but now the government is going after shisha bars and shisha.

Shisha, for those who don't know, is a mix of flavoured molasses and tobacco. It is smoked through a water pipe, called a hookah.

Shisha bars are lounges where people of age can come to legally smoke shisha indoors, while drinking their favourite beverage. These facilities may soon be outlawed by the Alberta government, much to my chagrin.

I have had some really good times with friends, and even family, sitting around a table and puffing on the aromatic and flavourful wonder that is shisha.

The provincial government would like to ban shisha and other flavoured tobaccos now.

This is supposedly to stop youths from smoking. Youths cannot go into shisha bars because they are not of age, but that's beside the point, apparently.

Youths cannot even legally buy shisha, or any other tobacco product, because they are not of age.

Smoking will always be a forbidden fruit for youth, because it may give the illusion of being more mature.

Youths smoked long before there was any sort of flavoured tobacco, and they will continue to smoke if flavoured tobacco disappears again.

Perhaps instead of attempting to force society one way or another, maybe the government should spend more time focusing on education.

If youths refuse to accept the education they have received about smoking, then the government has done all it can do.

It is not the government's job to control people's lives, but while we're on this tangent, here's another suggestion: why not make the penalties for those caught selling to youth so harsh that nobody will be willing to do it?

Unless the government wants to outlaw tobacco entirely, there will be a problem with youths smoking.

The government could actually make a more meaningful difference by banning unhealthy foods, which cause countless problems for our health-care system.

They could also try banning alcohol, because, let's face it, liver problems and other complications from alcohol abuse also weigh down our system, not to mention the policing required to keep rowdy drunks in line.

We could just continue this logical line of thought until the government becomes the ultimate nanny, reprimanding us for everything it doesn't want us to do.

Or, we could let people make their own choices, and let them live with the consequences.

Firehouse News

It has been quite a few months since the last time I updated readers on the goings-on of the Didsbury Fire Department.

Since then, we have welcomed a new fire chief, deputy fire chief, and a new training officer.

We have also launched a Cadet Program that includes six students from the high school who will go through the same training and exercises as our members. After graduation, if the students choose to stay within the community, they will receive a pager so they can respond to calls.

The month of November has been a little bit out of the ordinary.

In the first week, we were called out to a few residential alarm bells.

This was brought on from the cold fog that had rolled in, frosting up the power lines and causing outages to parts of town. When the power returned, three of the alarm systems activated, which we responded to.

There was also a storm that had rolled in, dumping a lot of snow in a short period of time.

Many roads in the county became extremely icy with reduced visibility. In these circumstances, we would expect to respond to all sorts of motor vehicle accidents.

Thankfully this was not the case.

There was not a single major accident where our assistance was needed during this time.

After the storm, we were dispatched out to the QEII where a semi hauling a load of plywood had caught fire.

One of the biggest concerns was if the trailer was on fire as well.

Luckily, the product was under a tarp which prevented the heat from building up or from embers landing on it. The flames were quickly extinguished, a tow truck hauled the remains away, and the untouched trailer was picked up by a fellow semi driver.

The majority of the calls this past month have been medical related where we have had to assist the ambulance crew.

We have our fingers crossed that the remainder of the year will remain as quiet as this month.

Kyle Leeson is a member of the Didsbury Fire Department.

Tools stolen out of garage

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

A garage on the 1400 block of 20th Avenue was broken into sometime before Nov. 19 at 11 a.m., according to police.

After access was gained to the garage, Cpl. Warren Wright said the car parked inside was also reportedly broken into and tools were stolen out of the trunk of the vehicle.

"Electrician tools were stolen," said Wright. "Specifically, electrician hand tools from the trunk of a vehicle, which was locked inside a garage in the backyard."

Somebody gained entrance into the garage by breaking the lock of the door, and the trunk of the vehicle itself was locked, he added.

The tools that are missing are valued at $2,000. If anyone has any information pertaining to this crime, they are being asked to call Crime Stoppers at 1-888-222-TIPS or to contact the local RCMP detachment.

Become a Board Member

Members are needed for the Regional Assessment Review Board in central Alberta. The Central Alberta Regional Assessment Partnership is seeking people with expertise who want to be part of the assessment review board.

We are seeking citizens who have:

- an assessment, legal or valuation background
- expertise/knowledge on quasi-judicial boards
- a flexible schedule/ daytime availability for training and hearings
- writing experience an asset

Board members are responsible for issuing decisions on disputes relative to property assessment. Board members will:

- receive training from Municipal Affairs
- receive remuneration for the responsibilities
- have an opportunity to network with like-minded individuals within the region

Five board members will be selected by a nomination review committee made up of representatives from member municipalities. Submit your cover letter and resume to RegionalARB@reddeer.ca.

Apply to become a member of the board by January 11, 2013. Successful applicants will be contacted in January. For more information visit www.reddeer.ca.

Moving progressively into the future by enhancing our community and quality of life, while respecting our history.

Council considers new skate park initiative

BY KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

If youth have their way, the Didsbury skate park may eventually grow into a full-sized park, with a little help from town council.

It was brought to the attention of Coun. Peter Versluys last month that youth in the town are really looking for something more.

Versluys said when he attended a Take Off Pounds Sensibly meeting in early October, there were various groups in attendance who wanted to voice their opinions on recreation in Didsbury.

A skate park facility, drop-in youth centre, as well as Live Action Role Playing were discussed, but the skate park was the focus of the conversation, he said.

"What I quickly decided is, if this is what the youth are talking about, the community can't just let it slide," said Versluys.

"Some students were willing to do the groundwork looking at Olds, Sundre, Airdrie and Taber," he added. "They looked into it, and the report was back swiftly."

Zach Creighton, who helped to kick-start the skate park initiative, said he has been in town for a while, and he's heard many suggestions for the skate park.

He noted that in the past, there have been teens with some good ideas, but it has always fallen through at one time or another, so he decided to kick-start an official initiative.

Creighton, who works with kids through the Didsbury Out of School Care Association, said "A lot of the kids I work with use scooters, and a lot of the time I'll drive by the skate park and see a lot of kids using it."

He noted that Sundre has a skate park too. "It's not only teens using it, it's younger kids too." He helped write up a report of how parks were funded by towns and the county.

When completed, he sent his report to council but also to the other teens, and other friends.

In his mind, he said that the type of park he would see Didsbury needing is similar to the Sundre skate park, which is still small compared to the one in Airdrie, but big enough for how many people would utilize it.

"I tried to include, in my report, numerous town sizes," he noted. "Airdrie ends up servicing massive amounts of people."

Didsbury CAO Roy Brown noted at the Committee of the Whole meeting that the town is going through a recreation master plan and will require five community members to take part in that committee once the report has been completed.

Mayor Brian Wittal said he knows there were a few kids working to raise money in the past, but they've never been able to raise enough money on their own.

"If this is a priority for the community then we need to be prioritizing and focusing on that," said Wittal. "Even if it's just a little word of mouth that this is being worked on, it may get the community moving on it."

He said that the price does really put a damper on the whole idea though.

"It becomes pretty disheartening. Even the Sundre (skate park) that would be more to our liking, is a quarter-million dollars."

He noted that the town had set aside some money over the last couple of years.

"It might be a few thousand dollars now, which doesn't go very far either, but we've always said we need to do this recreation master plan, sit back and look at what we have, what it is people want, and what we need to do," said Wittal.

One of his considerations, he said, is whether the skate park, if built, will get used for years to come with minimal maintenance costs.

Building the pool 30 years ago seemed like a good idea, he said, but as it has gotten older, the operational costs have been going up.

"A skate park, that's a bit simpler. You may have to do some repairs on it every few years. Paint it, whatever you need to do to it to keep it in good condition, but that's pretty much it."

"I don't think it's a bad idea, but it's a lump of money to come up with, short term."

He noted that if the town saved $50,000 per year for the next five years, the town may be able to budget for it, but that is a long way down the road.

And for taxpayers, he noted, that's a big chunk of change.

"There's not an easy solution, and as I said the priorities have to be decided on."

"You're not getting a net dollar return on it," he added, "but that's not what recreation is about."

Recreation, he said, is about keeping the community active.

"And if it's skateboarding or whatever, they're having some fun. It's definitely an important thing, but councils have been reluctant to just step out in support of it."

"All those things have to be looked at, like what we want, what we need, and what we can afford are three different things."

Curlers secure a spot at seniors winter games

BY CHRISTI ALBERS-MANICKE
For the Review

After two close games in the finals, two local curlers will be representing their age group and zone at the Alberta 55 Plus Winter Games in 2013.

Adeline Fedyk and her husband Bill will both be competing at the games, which will be held in Calgary in February.

The Fedyks won their first game by one point, making it a tight game and their second saw them move into an extra end, and get the win.

"All the teams were so closely matched, we were lucky to win it."

For the past 12 years, they have been attending both the winter and summer games as well as the Canada Games.

"We try a few different activities," she says. "This is the third time we've been at the games for the ice curling."

Fedyk says she and her husband have always been active, but for a few years they took a break from the sport of curling.

"I've been curling since 2006. I used to curl when I was younger but I was off of it for about 26 years while I was working in Calgary. I just picked it up when we moved out to the Cremona area," she says. "We needed something to do for the winter and we had both curled before so we decided to join the small town community league when we moved to Cremona."

Fedyk says they're both grateful for the chance to represent their town at the winter games and look forward to it.

"We're so grateful for the opportunity to get into this sport," she says, adding that she hopes others will join the local league.

"We hope others will follow us into the sport and take part. They're a lot of fun and you get to meet a lot of people and socialize."

U-18 Team Alberta goes to Dawson Creek

KEVIN VINK
Review Staff

Caitlin Fyten and her U-18 hockey team fought hard at the National Women's Under-18 Championship in Dawson Creek Nov. 7-11 but landed in seventh place.

Despite the loss, Team Alberta's Fyten said that it went well and that she enjoyed her time there.

"The atmosphere at nationals just really gives you an adrenalin rush. It was really fun playing and the staff and everyone at the rink, how we got treated as players was really awesome."

She said one of the highlights of her weekend was being able to play in front of a crowd.

Out of the eight teams competing, Team Alberta started strong, but ended up losing steam as the tournament progressed, she said. "We just didn't come ready to play," she said.

"We started out with our first game, we were strong, and we actually ended up beating the team that got silver."

"After that we just didn't play full 60-minute games, we only played partially and I think that's what cost us."

Now that the tournament is over, she is back playing with her U-19 Wave Adult Hockey League team, the Edge Mountaineers.

The native Didsbury-area teen is currently living in Calgary with some relatives and attending Edge School for Athletes in Springbank, she said.

"I'm back with my winter team now and my focus has gone back to there. I'm a leader on that team so I just have to come back and play with them now."

At the school, she said practice and workouts are built into the daily schedule, and her team has been doing well so far this year.

"So far we have only lost three games and we actually are doing really well this year, and we have a lot of potential, I think, and it's looking good for playoffs," she said.

KRUGER, Shirley Elizabeth Erna
(nee Biedler)
January 31, 1941 – November 10, 2012

Shirley passed away peacefully at the age of 71, at the Red Deer Hospice, after a lengthy struggle with Lupus. She leaves behind her children, Leann (Camrose), Harvey (Sylvan Lake) and Pamela Kristoff (Corey) of Cremona. Blessed Grandmother to Landon, Callie, Clint and Cody. She was predeceased by her dear parents, Regina Arndt and Alfred Biedler and loving sister, Vicky. Shirley was raised on the farm at Friesenfeld, Manitoba (Steinbach). She graduated from Nursing in Selkirk, after which she worked as a Psychiatric nurse in Ponoka, Alberta. Shirley then married and moved to the Kruger family farm at Torrington, Alberta where she loved every aspect of farm life and was very devoted. Shirley continued her nursing career in Didsbury, where she retired.

She suffered many years with Lupus, but lived her life very courageously, leaning on her faith in her Lord and Savior. Shirley was devoted to nursing and the medical field to her end, as she donated her body to the University of Calgary for Lupus Research. Shirley touched many lives and hearts with her kind and compassionate Angel Wings. Shirley's family is truly grateful for her dedicated friends for their support. As well, to the Red Deer Hospice for their deeply compassionate care. In lieu of a memorial, any donations may be made to the Red Deer Hospice, 99 Arnot Ave. in Shirley's memory or the Lupus Society. Psalm 147:5.
